About This Game

In "The Space Garden" you can build your own garden across the Universe!
Discover, acquire and grow your plants with love as you watch them evolve.

Collect fruits by yourself or request help from your "helpers", a race of mini friends who come from nature.

Discover new options and get more experience to unlock new in-game features.

But take care! The space is a huge and dangerous thing. Your garden might need protection from aliens and other hazards which will steal/destroy your fruits.

Unlock items, increase your experience as a farmer and enjoy special events across the game all the time!

Make it grow, give it love and expand the garden to the infinite.

A really common game.

It isn't very good

The most attractive point is plant on a planet. You can even connect to other planet. The crop roll around the planet. However, It won't work after you close the game. I think this game isn't a idle game.

And this game is very expensive for this little content.

4/10. I don't expect much out of a clicker game, but after just a short time with this I was so frustrated, that I am sure I could find a better game. On the surface this is almost identical to another clicker I enjoyed called Plantera. Plantera has a cuter theme, nicer graphics, and smoother controls, as well as a lower price tag. Here are some of the annoying things that made me give up on this completely after a short time with it.

- No tutorial or explanation for anything in this game (such as why there are different helpers or what the difference is)
- Annoying mechanics such as your helpers dying and needing to be clicked on to revive
- There is an exponential curve for costs, but removing plants does not lower the cost
- There is no out of game progression (which is hard when costs are constantly increasing)
- Helpers move between planets for no apparent reason and without your control leaving entire planets untended
- Saving the game doesn't always work, meaning any time spent playing the game could be reset for no reason. The interface is awful and the game itself isn't very intuitive. Has potential, but that's it.. Space Invaders version of Plantera.

It's not an idler. Please understand the difference. This is not a game you can run while working. You can play it while watching Netflix... on a different monitor/tv, or while listening to music, or while cooking, but it stops running if you switch tabs! It doesn't run if you close out!

8/10 Space Invaders Plantera with zombie invasions and terraforming and adding asteroid colonies. I love it to pieces.. Like Plantera, but more expensive, and less fun

I loved this game, I love plants and also i love space so this is the perfect combination for me hehe,

A lot to do in order to pick all the fruits and click all the ufos so they dont steal your fruits.

I really hates zombies, but thats the point xD hehe.. Enjoyable, non violent game that young ones can enjoy.

Getting coins can seem slow in the beginning. It gets better after a little bit.. boring, too much grinding.. It was a pretty good game at start but once you save, log out and try to log in the next day the save file will have completely glitched out and you will not be able to play the game ever again after the first play. Not worth the money.. Not bad for a game by a single person. It's pretty solid mechanics wise. Very simple which is good as it doesn't explain anything in the game except in pictures like helper + apple = money. Everything has little i's on them so you can click that for simplistic help.

It's actually fairly enjoyable. Very much a cookie clicker\clicker heroes meats gardens in space. Plant plants, get fruit, fruit gives coins, coins by better plants. Rinse and repeat basically. At first it doesn't seem obvious how to expand from your 1st planet to another. You get a skill\buy option at lvl 9 I think it was. Every level up if you unlock something it will show a card version of it on screen for you. You get an unlock about every 2 levels until lvl 20. After that it seems to space out more and more. achievements are easy to get. I would say the pacing of the game is a little off but otherwise it's pretty good.

If you want a casual time waster like cookie clicker\clicker heroes then this is perfect. The hardest thing you will do is try to manage to click all the fruit once you get more than one planet.

Also the graphics are quite pretty. Really nicely done.. What an adorable pixel clicker game.

I love it!. The Space Garden has no instructions and no offline progress.

Plantera is the better version of this game.. a ok game at first but it gets boring fast.. Fun and relaxing farming game. Except for the damm aliens stealing my crops !! Need anti spacecraft guns asap XD.. The Space Plantera
